

Leaf Loop

Directions: At the end of Rock Springs Road continue south onto grass.
The Leaf Loop has yellow labels.

Name _____

Fort Worth Botanic Garden

Spring blooms of the _____ resemble puffs of smoke.
The yellow dye from the wood was used during the Civil War period.

Native Americans ate nuts of the _____ tree in the fall of the year.
We use them in pies.

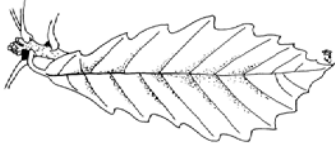

The _____
tree produces interesting seed pods that look like a string of black beads.

The sweet acorns of the

are a food preference for many wildlife species.

The fan-shaped leaf of the

was eaten by dinosaurs.

Native Americans used oil extracted from nuts of the tree for cooking.

The black juice from the fruit of the

can be used for dye.

Resin from the

was used as chewing gum.

The _____
tree has a large, fragrant white flower pollinated by beetles.

People carry the large and glossy seed of the tree as good luck tokens.

Native Americans made cord and string from the inner bark of the
_____.

Draw your own leaf shape